Dear Author:

The review of your revised submission to Demography (MS# 2017-407) “Lifespan dispersion in times of life expectancy fluctuation: The case of Central and Eastern Europe” is now complete. Based on the most recent revisions to your manuscript and the recommendation of the Deputy Editor assigned to your manuscript, we are delighted to accept your paper for publication in Demography.

Please make whatever additional changes to your paper that you would like (if any), and then send us the final draft that we can put in the publication queue. Should you make any changes please describe them in a cover letter but note that they should all be minor at this stage. As you prepare the final version, please do not add to the length of the text and do not include additional tables or figures. Send your final/revised manuscript to Jack Byerly, Editorial Assistant, at demography@psu.edu.

Please include the following:

- The manuscript in Word or LaTeX format. Tables can be embedded in the manuscript file or in an Excel file. Figures can be embedded in the manuscript file, in an Excel file, or as .pdf file.
- The entire manuscript (except the appendices), including tables and figures, in a single .pdf file.
- All appendices (if any) in a second pdf file. Please keep in mind that the appendices will published only on-line and will not be copy-edited
- All figures should be in gray scale, as we do not print color figures (unless authors opt to pay the $1,150 fee to do so). Thus, it is important to ensure that all of the necessary categories/trends should be easily distinguishable without the aid of color.
- The PAA office is working to highlight Demography articles through social media. In your email to Jack, please include a shortened version of the manuscript’s title (a maximum of 60 characters, including spaces) for use in PAA’s Twitter posts. Please also include, if available, the Twitter username of each author.
